FOOD ACT REQUIREMENTS

The operator must ensure that the design, construction and location of the place of the food business enables food to be safe and suitable, including by:

- Identifying and managing any risks posed to the safety or suitability of food
- Ensuring that the place has adequate space for producing, handling and processing of food as well as fixtures, fittings and equipment
- Ensuring that the design of the place enables the movement of staff, visitors and food to flow in a way that prevents and manages risk
- Ensuring the design of the place provides easy access for cleaning and maintenance
- Ensuring the place is designed, constructed and located as to exclude dirt, dust, fumes, smoke and other contaminates as well as prevents pests from entering and remaining
- Ensure materials used in the construction of the premises are not capable of contaminating food

The operator must also ensure that the facilities, equipment and essential services are designed, constructed, and located in a way that enables food to be safe and suitable, this includes:

- Ensuring facilities, equipment, and essential services are not operated beyond their capacity or capability
- Water used for producing, processing, handling of food and for personal hygiene and cleaning is suitable for purpose, does not adversely affect the safety and suitability of food
- The capacity of the water supply is adequate for the food business

TRAINING REQUIREMENTS

It is good operating practice for at least one person, preferably the manager, to have completed a basic food safety course. Under the Food Act 2014 managers are responsible for training their staff. For example if you are operating under a template Food Control Plan the day-to-day manager must be familiar with and understand all procedures before training staff. The manager would then need to complete and sign a staff training record for each staff person who works in their business.
